Of the many social affairs during the Thanksgiving season, none were more brilliant or beautiful than the surprise dinner party given on Saturday evening at 7 o'clock by Mrs. E. B. Reynolds, in honor of her husband's birthday. Although kept a secret from Mr. Reynolds, the dining room of the home was in artistic adornment in honor of the occasion, and the dinner table a picture of lights and coloring emphasizing the Thanksgiving season. In the center, a mound of gorgeous chrysanthemums of "red and white" were encircled by a shower of red and white tulips and red and white ribbon pendants from the electric dome above the table. The place cards were in hand painted designs of "strutting turkeys," and the season's colors were further emphasized in two yellow pumpkins topped with red and white candles, which adorned each end of the pretty table.

When Mr. Reynolds came home that evening from his office he was entertained in the sitting room, and before he realized the reason for this special attention, his gentleman friends to the number of seven began to arrive. When the secret was known, the host was most joyous, and delighted with the surprise arranged in honor of his birthday. A delicious five course dinner was served to H. J. Reinhardt, A. J. Speith, A. K. Sparre, Dr. L. J. Lush, L. P. Gabbard, Jess M. Cook and the host, E. B. Reynolds.

THE IKE ASHBURN WAY

(From the Dallas Times-Herald) The tumult and the shouting die. The football crowds depart. Forlornly the goal posts shiver in the winter wind. The "season" is over. Which reminds us that in schools there should be a season for other things than football. A season of study, a season of preparing for a game harder than any gridiron grapple, a season of preparing for the game of life.

Down at the Agricultural and Mechanical College of Texas the students, it appears, are not unmindful of the value that comes from such a seasoning, are willing to work hard in order to reap the advantages of such a seasoning. There are some 2,200 students at A. and M.; do you know that 800 of these are working their way through college? That's pretty fine, isn't it? That shows the students at A. and M., full of college spirit as they are, don't think a touchdown the sumnum bonum of education. Here's a little story of one of these students as told by Mr. Ewing Moseley, former president of the Dallas County Ex-Students' club, a very timely story showing that there are college students who, though they are neither dashing halfbacks nor pass smashing ends, yet win for themselves—and for their college—victories finer than those achieved on football fields: Came to A. and M. a student who strove to win his way through college by waiting on the table. It was noticed at night that he was not in the dormitory. Ike Ashburn, commandant, went out on a still for him. He found the lad living in a pup tent and off canned goods. "You can't live out here," said Ike, "you'll freeze." "I have been living out here and I haven't frozen yet," the young fellow sturdily answered.

But Ike wouldn't stand for his staying there. So in what they call the Ike Ashburn way of helpfulness he got some lumber and out of that lumber the lad constructed a shack. There he slept of nights but so diligently did he study during the day that he won high honors in his class. Off for the oil fields he was in the summer. There he worked and he saved, so that when he returned to college he paid debts he had necessarily accumulated during the college year and had a little left over for sticking in the bank.

There are others down at A. and M. like him, Mr. Moseley tells us. One youth arrived at College Station with three cows and throughout the year helped pay for his "schooling" with their milk, he doing the milking. Who shall say that youths like these are not a high honor to the State? Who shall say that a State educational institution which encourages that spirit is not a high asset of the State?

KNOWING AND TELLING

Dr. Frank Crane has been constantly preaching that there are some things which we know but cannot tell. I grant you there are some things we know and had better not tell, but not because we are better than them but because it is better not to tell them. If I am thoroughly acquainted with anything, if I know anything, then I can tell it because it is mine and I can reproduce that which is mine. But if I only half-knew it, it would be in a hazy, general way, have a general impression of it, then it is not mine and I cannot tell it.

We often hear people say, "He knows good deal but he just can't tell it." I have no patience with such expressions. My experience has been that after they were found out, and sometimes it takes a long time to find them out, they never did know it. This knowing and not telling, is to my mind, a subterfuge behind which hides the half-trained man. His friends may get an occasional glimpse of light and presume, in modesty, he hides more but when he is put to the acid test it will be found that he has told all he knows, and his limitation is not in the telling but in the knowing.

PLAY THE GAME FAIR

It is the rule of life that you give the other fellow half the road. This is a literal law when it comes to driving on the public highways. The other fellow is entitled to his part of the road, and when we meet a driver of a car who will not give, we call him a road hog. This same rule of the road applies in life. The man in business who tries to shove his competitor in the ditch by unfair methods is just as guilty of a breach as is the auto driver who crowds the other fellow to the ditch. Life is a game and to succeed and be enjoyed it must be played according to the rules. The thoroughly selfish men is rarely ever the successful man. Cooperation and service and cheerfulness are much better assets than selfishness. If the game of selfishness is played out to the end there is always one a little stronger to come along and shove the other fellow off. Play the game fair.—Ex.

Leaves, leaves, everywhere. It is this season of the year that makes a man almost wish he didn't have any trees. But when he stops and thinks how much comfort these trees give him in the summer and the attractiveness to the home for the greater part of twelve months, he ought to be willing to do a little extra work in gathering up leaves for a few weeks.

Representative John Garner of Texas has the right spirit when voicing his agreement with the plea made by Representative Garrett of Tennessee for Democratic support of the Republican tax reduction program he said: "I do not care if a proposition emanates from Republican or Democratic sources. If it is best for the country it will get my vote." If more public officials would adopt that policy the country would be much better off.

Our good friend Major Nick P. Houx has revived the Mexia Weekly Herald and will issue it regularly from now on. Major Houx was editor of that paper for many years, but some four or five years ago he sold it and last year it was allowed to suspend. ## COUNTY AGENT C. L. BEASON MAKES ANNUAL REPORT COUNTYS ACTIVITY

Below is given a summary of the annual report of County Agent C. L. Beason as made to the Extension Service Department of A. and M. College:

"The report herewith submitted is, after all, seemingly a mere index and not a record of county agent activities, since there is so much done for which no record could possibly be made to show. However, it is hoped that the report will, at least serve to show the spirit, good will, and the marked improvement in the general attitude toward county agent work throughout the county. Everybody seems anxious to speak a good word for the service, and all are anxious to share in its helpfulness, to the people, recognizing the county agent as a sort of "pipe line" running from the Extension Service of the College to every community, and likewise, to every farm home in the county.

"For whatever success has been attained, too much credit can not be given to the helpful suggestions of District Agent A. W. Buchanan, to Secretary S. E. Eberstadt, of the Bryan Chamber of Commerce for his untiring aid in community meetings and fairs, to the teachers and club leaders of the county for their hearty support and co-operation, to many questions asked Mr. Sherwood indicated the great interest the people had in the matter of egg production, and the producing of poultry capable of making good egg records. Mr. Sherwood stated that the number of eggs a hen lays determines her worth as a chicken, but that it was no easy task to produce a flock of high egg production.

Auction Great Success.

Auction sale a great success.

Club boy's poultry brings highest price. The fifth prize-winning cockerel, exhibited by Robert John Persons, a club member, was auctioned off by Secretary Sam E. Eberstadt for $25.25, the highest price paid during the show for an individual. The cockerel was sold the day before in a pen of birds, the purchaser donating the cockerel in the latter to the poultry association. Tony Lafosse was the purchaser of the cockerel. Great excitement was shown in the races for the birds released with money prizes, one boy bringing in from somewhere a chicken which had not been released. Manager Boriskie, thinking the boy should be rewarded for his enterprise in bringing in a chicken, paid him fifty cents and released the bird to return to its rightful owner. Those who have helped in making it possible to hold this great poultry show have lent entrance to an industry which is capable of making Brazos county, not only famous, but tremendously prosperous.

Was Robert E. Lee a Success?

W. L. Harrington

The New York Times featured in the last few days an address by Gamaliel Bradford in which Robert E. Lee was accorded an extremely high place in history. I do not believe there is any fair-minded person who would not agree with Mr. Bradford in this statement. Robert E. Lee is one of the outstanding figures in American history. Besides being a great general he was a full sized man and yet as a success, the project for which he fought and gave the best he had, failed. The merits of the case are no longer matters of dispute. The only thing that I wish to write about is the success or failure of this great man. Lee failed to accomplish the greatest task of his life. He did many things successfully, a great many and very successfully, but in the final test he failed to secure success yet the whole world accords him a great place. What is success? Is it popular favor? If it is, then certainly it is an extremely dangerous thing to possess. There is no man who has ever basked in the sunshine of popularity but that has learned that what is popular at ten o'clock may meet with utter disaster at noon. Popularity, it seems to me is the praise and adulation of an extremely changeable if not fickle, public mind. Those of us who have lived any length of time have known a large number of popular men who were suddenly placed in the discard, and if the world ever catches a moment to think it will wonder what has become of them. If success is not popularity, then what is it?

Success Duty Well Performed.

If we use the case of the immortal Lee then it would seem as though success was duty well performed to the best of one's ability even if failure were the resultant portion. There

BRYAN CITIZENS PLEDGE LOYALTY PRESIDENT BIZZELL A. & M. COLLEGE

The Hand of Faith and Congratulations Extended President W. B. Bizzell By Citizens of Bryan In Appreciation of His Decision to Stay With A.
and M. College—Committee From Bryan Chamber of Commerce Present Statement.

Not unmindful of President W. B. Bizzell's declination of recent offers of the presidency of other institutions of this and other states the citizens of Bryan expressed their appreciation of his decision to stay with the Agricultural and Mechanical College of Texas this afternoon in a prepared statement presented to him by a committee from the Bryan Chamber of Commerce. The hand of faith and congratulations was extended by the following committee: Mrs. Lee J. Rountree, President J. M. Gordon, John M. Lawrence, E. H. Astin, J. Webb Howell, W. J. Coulter, Mayor Tyler Haswell, Major L. M. McInnis, E. E. McAdams, J. N. Dulaney and Secretary Sam E. Eberstadt. The statement in the form of a scroll bearing the seal of the Bryan Chamber of Commerce.

STATEMENT IN FULL.

"We, the members of the Bryan and Brazos County Chamber of Commerce of the city of Bryan, we, representatives of the larger body of citizens of this county, believe that you have learned the value of life, not in the sordid terms of wealth and power, but in the nobler ends of service and duty. To you we bring our humble gratitude at the wise decision that you have made in refusing both money and honor to further serve here at A. and M., the students of the College, the citizens of the State and your friends, the people of Bryan and Brazos county, and in no measured terms we express to you this appreciation and gratitude.

"Your fortunes you have shaped not with gold, nor still more worthless popularity but with a truly God-fearing sense of duty. Beneath the rule of men, really great, duty is the keynote of life. You, Dr. Bizzell, have learned this lesson so well that we, the humble citizens of this county, yet your honored friends, still have you as our guide, as our director towards a greater and bigger life.

"The pathways of power you have forsaken for the harder road of duty, yet monuments are not wanting to your efforts. Look with us, if you will, in every direction and you will see the smiling faces, the contented, happy countenances of two thousand youths. Look once more and you will see in brick and mortar that which you have built well. Neither time nor nature can efface one single deed. How much longer then will last the multitude of deeds which you have rendered in service?

"Love begets love; loyalty begets loyalty and in this hour we pledge to you both our affection and loyalty, not for what has been done but for that greater deed; that you would remain with us.

"In the years that roll by, in the days and the hours to come, we are at your service. It is an honor to serve you, it is a pleasure to work with you, it is a duty to follow you, for you think first of others and last of yourself.

"Again, we ask you to accept our appreciation and loyalty. More, let us, your friends and neighbors, bear some of the burdens that are heavy on your shoulders. If you but ask you will receive from us hearty co-

"SILENT" MILLER CAPT. AGGIE FOOTBALL 1924

Special to Bryan Daily Eagle)
COLLEGE STATION, Tex., Dec. 8.—L. T. "Silent" Miller, last year's choice for captaincy of the Aggie football team, who heroically resigned the position to the next best man, "Bull" Johnson, when his injury prevented him from wearing the Aggie moleskins when practice started in the fall has once more been called to the position of leadership of the squad on the prospect of his being in the line-up again next year.

SIGNALS FOR DRIVERS AS ADOPTED BY BRYAN

That Bryan may be in the line with other cities of Texas which are adopting a system of definite arm signals to be used by autoists for the information of those just behind and the prevention of accidents, the following brief statement of these customary signals is published:

To indicate that a right turn is intended hold the arm outside the car and upward at a 45-degree angle.

To indicate a left turn is intended hold the arm out horizontally.

To indicate stop or slow-down hold the arm down at a 45-degree angle.

Precautions urged upon the public are these: Don't delay long after giving a signal before acting; don't act quickly that the driver behind does not have time to understand; don't signal too briefly; and don't signal indifferently—be positive. These rules have been adopted by the Bryan city commission and persons failing to observe these rules are without protection from the law in case of accident.
